JESSOPS

Mountnessing Road, Blackmore, Ingatestone, CM4 0NX

Set within some 7.25 acres in the heart of the Essex countryside, Jessops is an elegant Grade II listed Georgian house, its handsome façade softened each spring by a magnificent sweep of wisteria.

Dating from the early nineteenth century, the house has been meticulously restored and thoughtfully refined by its current owners in collaboration with Nicolas Jacob Architects and Cubitt Theobald, specialists in period property. Their approach was careful and considered, preserving the character of the house while quietly enhancing it for modern living. Original features have been beautifully restored throughout, from period radiators and traditional shutters to the historic house bell, returned to working order by the renowned Whitechapel Bell Foundry, whose craftsmen traced it back to their workshops in the nineteenth century.

Inside, the rooms are elegantly proportioned and flooded with natural light. Tall sash windows frame views across the gardens and courtyard, drawing the outside gently into the house, while handmade oak cabinetry and underfloor heating in the kitchen and utility bring comfort while remaining entirely in keeping with the house.

Upstairs, the bedrooms enjoy views across the surrounding countryside, with the principal suite offering a particularly peaceful retreat. The gardens have been thoughtfully composed. A charming courtyard garden centres around ancient olive trees, while spring brings a beautiful display of tulips and alliums, followed by fragrant David Austin roses as summer unfolds.

Beyond, the grounds open out to meadow and a wonderful pool complex, perfect for everyday life and entertaining guests, with further buildings providing an annexe, garaging and stabling. Jessops is simply an exceptional house.
